

Glee Club Broadcasts Over National Hookup

Lloyd Huntley Features Glee Club On International Program — Originated Band While Student At Colgate University

DECEMBER the second will be a big night for the McGill Glee Club boys when they go on the air with Lloyd Huntley and his orchestra. This will be an exchange feature with the U.S.A. and will be broadcast over the facilities of the Mutual Broadcasting System and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The boys have been practising very hard for three weeks and if this engagement is successful, Mr. Huntley hopes to arrange a return one in January. An out-of-town trip may also be arranged, perhaps an exchange trip to Colgate University. Mr. Huntley's Alma Mater, Professor Harry Norris, who has kindly given so much of his time, will lead the boys in "When Did You Leave Heaven". Mr. Huntley has very kindly invited the boys to be his guests at the Mount Royal Hotel on that evening. He has also made arrangements whereby all McGill students may come without a cover charge, and at a charge of 1.00, including supper, per person for bona fide McGill students. The program begins at 10:30, and the Glee Club will go on the air at 10:35.

Lloyd Huntley was in the Glee Club at Colgate University, of which the membership was 100. The regular club of 20, was chosen from the 100, and every Easter they went on all expense paid trips to Chicago, New York and Cleveland. They travelled by specially chartered railway cars. All these trips were supervised by professors but run by student managers.

While Mr. Huntley was at Colgate University, he formed the Isle O' Blues orchestra. The band had 15 men, 4 of which belonged to the original Colgate band. Mr. Huntley was also Sports Editor on the Colgate "Maroon", and was elected to the Honorary Journalistic Fraternity. He is also a member of the Phi Theta Epsilon Fraternity.

The alluring fox trot renditions and drowsy waltzes of Lloyd Huntley and his orchestra are known at the D'Armonville, supper spot of the Bois de Boulogne in Paris, and at Murray's Club in London, a cafe often patronized by the former Prince of Wales. In America he is well known for his playing at the Coral Gables Country Club in Miami, the famous Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs, and more recently at the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman in Chicago. He has played in most of the well known hotels and clubs in America, and he has also made many radio broadcasts, among which, was the "Lucky Strike" hour from the Cosmopolitan Hotel in Denver, Walter Winchell was master of ceremonies on this broadcast. In London his band was referred to as a "Real Gee Whizz Jazz Band."

Oil Company Shows Films To Chemists

A talking picture on lubrication and lubricating oils, supplied by the Shell Oil Company was shown to a large group of students in the main lecture theatre of the Chemistry building yesterday afternoon. The picture was shown under the auspices of the McGill Student Chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

The picture traced the history of transportation from the early Stone Ages to the present time, illustrating the various means of overcoming or reducing friction leading up to the modern methods using lubricants. Even in early times man realized that some force caused heating and grinding when two surfaces moved in contact with one another. They realized that the same force reduced speed and that it was a problem to be attacked. During the Roman period the famous charioteers used tiger fat to grease the axles of their chariots. Similarly the oarlocks of the galleys were lubricated with hot pitch.

The development of the modern high speed, highly efficient machine is dependent to a great extent upon the quality of the lubricants available. The development of machinery has kept one step ahead of the lubrication so new oils have to be constantly developed to keep pace with these improvements.

They are taking "Moon" Mullins' football candidacy lightly at Syracuse University. He tips the scales at 125 with playing equipment on and is believed to be the lightest player in college football.

McGILL ORATORS MEET VERMONT THIS FRIDAY

UPHOLDING the negative of the proposition "Resolved that the interests of civilization demand disarmament rather than armament", a McGill debating team will face a veteran team of the University of Vermont Friday night at 8:15 in Strathcona Hall.

Although the McGill team has not yet been announced, the executive of the Debating Union stated last night that the team will be chosen from among McGill's experienced debaters. The University of Vermont team has proven their worth in a tour which has covered many Canadian Universities. They are both undergraduate students in the faculty of Arts.

Fascist Element Here Seen As Trade Union Menace

Japan Possesses Balance Of Power In Asiatic Affairs

Sokolosky Analyzes "Tinder Box Of Asia" At Temple Emmanuel Forum

"JAPAN is now in a position to blackmail the rest of the world," stated George Sokolosky, noted writer and authority on foreign affairs in the Far East, in a speech, "The Tinder Box of Asia," delivered last night as the first of a series of four lectures at Temple Emmanuel. Japan in his opinion is far too realistic a country to ever consider a treaty as sacred and inviolate. Germany is also of the same opinion. According to Sokolosky the recent German-Japanese accord has its foundations in mere expediency, and may be broken as soon as the need for mutual support vanishes.

Analysing the recent events in Europe, Sokolosky firmly stated his belief that at the close of the Spanish civil war, Germany is ready to step in and annex the Spanish colonies in North Africa, and to send an invading army into the Free City of Danzig. The only possible means of preventing such moves would be a "combined threat of force from England and the United States." Italy is relatively unimportant, according to Sokolosky. In case of war Italy would cast her force on the side of the stronger allies, and the speaker saw little reason for an alliance with Britain.

Returning to the Far East, Sokolosky stated that in return for official recognition for conquests in North China, Japan might see her way clear to blackmail the nations of the world, offering in return neutrality in case of European war.

Both Japan and Germany have everything to gain and nothing to lose in case of world struggle for power. The opposite is true and applies to all the remaining major powers in Europe and America. The present Spanish civil war is not a fight between two hate-inspired doctrines, but rather the struggle of many imperialistic powers, whether Fascist or Socialist.

Mr. Sokolosky is an American born newspaperman, but has been prominent in the affairs of political importance in the Far East since 1919. In that same year he became affiliated with the Shanghai Students' Union, and played an influential role in its affairs. Sokolosky has settled in China and made it his permanent home, from where he writes newspaper and magazine articles pertaining to affairs in the Far East. He is at present in the midst of an imposing lecture tour of the United States and Canada.

Yesterday alone 220 lunches were served.

Photographers Far Behind Schedule On Annual Pictures

THIS refers to Notmans who are doing the photography this year for the McGill Annual. It seems that, as in past years, only very much more so, the graduating students are delaying their sittings until the last minute, or later. For the special benefit of the students, Notmans have transferred equipment from their own studios to Strathcona Hall. This was done only with some amount of trouble, because it meant depriving the studios proper of one or more of their photographers, and this at a time when their Christmas rush is just getting under way.

The photographers had hoped that all the sittings would be over before the Christmas holidays, but as you perhaps noticed in yesterday's daily, only one-third of the

Roback Outlines Underlying Causes Inferiority Complex

Psychologist, McGill Gold Medalist, Addresses Audience At Institute — Comprehensive Knowledge Of Emotional Make-Up Necessary To Conquer Feelings Of Inferiority

THE cardinal points in overcoming the inferiority complex are comprehensive knowledge of what we are attempting to overcome in our own personality makeup, and a transposition of the self into the observer, in order to clearly see the underlying basis of the inferiority complex. In this vein, Dr. Roback, eminent authority on the personality, and honour graduate of McGill, delivered his address on "Our Feelings of Inferiority", before a large audience in the Salle Dorée of the Mt. Royal last night. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Department of Psychology at McGill, and the Psychological Institute of Montreal.

Commencing with an explanation of the terms "complex" and "inferior", the speaker pointed out that the combined term inferiority complex has an entirely different meaning from the individual meanings. It is not merely a combination of words, but a pattern in itself. Defining the term, he referred to it "as a mechanism in the unconscious, which has come about through a flaw or defect in the personality, congenital or acquired, which tends to lead to compensation".

In comparing the older and modern theories of inferiority, he showed that the former only sought what was in the conscious mind, whereas in the recent theories, it has been proven that the inferiority complex is an unconscious condition.

In order to study the underlying causes of this complex, the application of dynamic psychology, a study of mental conflicts, is very effective. In addition the speaker clearly distinguished between the inferiority feeling, and the complex, the former being conscious the latter an unconscious condition.

Disguises Of Inferiority
The disguises cloaking the inferiority complex are many, and the true condition comes out into the open at various intervals. Noteworthy too is the fact that this complex is not merely a mechanism, but more important than this, is its being a behavior.

Tracing the history of the inferiority, Dr. Roback showed how it was in evidence in the writings of Cicero, Montaigne, Kant, who showed a great insight into the feelings of inferiority, and in Nietzsche. The speaker then outlined the importance of the studies of I. L. Koch, who originated the term, "psychopathic inferiority", he himself being an excellent example of the condition which he investigated.

Adler's Contribution

The greatest advance in the knowledge of inferiority came with the works of Alfred Adler, who "centralized and illuminated the theory of inferiority, with the reflections of Dynamic Personality". Adler's work on the association of inferiority with compensation, an amend to some defect, is of tremendous importance on the inferiority complex studies. The three possible conditions in the personality are first, compensation; secondly, overcompensation, the best examples of which are Beethoven, Demosthenes, Napoleon, and Byron; and lastly failure to overcome the condition altogether. In other words, "If we have defects, there is a tendency for the nervous system to overcome it. If our attempts

First Peace Study Group Meets Today

Vineberg Will Lead Discussion On Causes Of War

PROGRAMME OUTLINED

Discussion Groups To Be Continued Next Week

THIS afternoon at five o'clock, the Student Peace Movement will hold the first of a series of discussion groups which will feature its programme this year. These meetings will take place from five to six o'clock in Strathcona Hall. This afternoon's group will be led by Phil Vineberg, graduate fellow in Economics, and will study "The Basic Causes of War".

A second group will meet tomorrow afternoon to discuss "Canada and the League of Nations". This group will be led by James Gibson, Montreal Secretary for the League of Nations Society, who is known as a competent authority on the subject under discussion. Next week four meetings will take place and will discuss other aspects of the prevention of war.

The execution of the Peace Movement issued a statement last night in which it was stated that these study groups are open to all students interested in the cause of peace and are not limited to members of the Movement. Students need not attend all groups as each meeting will deal with its problem separately and to attend one group will not necessitate attending all the preceding groups.

To help students in the preparation of material for discussion a Research Committee has been formed consisting chiefly of graduate students. This committee will select books and articles from magazines and newspapers and place them at the disposal of students participating in the discussions.

This programme at McGill is a part of a national project being conducted by the Canadian Student Peace Movement, in an effort to make students conscious of the danger of war and the means to avert it. Meeting concurrently at other colleges throughout the Dominion will be other study groups and conferences. By means of communication with the national headquarters the findings of these groups will be coordinated and their results utilized in publications to be issued by the Movement.

Ready Made Notes

THIS year several of the professors have adopted a new scheme to help the student in his class work. At the beginning of the semester each student is given a manila folder in which there are the lecture notes for the entire term's work. Then as the professor gives each day's lecture the student follows the talk in the notes and supplements them whenever necessary. This mimeographed book is not just an outline of the course but actual notes and information about each topic.

At first glance this seems to be making the life of the student too easy and may be thought to make him even lazier than he is now. Professors and instructors opposing this plan say that the system will make the student "soft" and will incline him to do absolutely no work at all. On the other hand, taking notes from certain of the faculty lecturers is a most difficult and trying task. Part of this is due to not being able to follow the trend of the thought that the speaker is trying to set up; while another part may be due to the complexity of the subject matter itself. In a subject of higher economics or one of the involved sciences, the ordinary student is likely to come out of the hour's lecture with a blank face and a huge amount of notes which, when read over, make no sense at all. This predicament gives the pupil the choice of going back to see the professor and having the subject explained again or copying the notes of a classmate who thinks that he understood the day's work. The former is an inconvenience to the teacher. The latter leaves room for a great deal of conjecture and misunderstanding on the part of the student.

Wouldn't it be better, then, for the professors to hand out the lecture notes of his course at the beginning of the term? This would facilitate the work for the student and make for an even better understanding of the lectures and the work that the professor is trying to teach. The object of the lecture is not to make the student work to get his knowledge, but to give him the knowledge regardless of the method. What can possibly be gained by keeping him in a constant state of wonderment when, with the notes before him, he can follow the talk with greater ease and interest? After all, it is only when the undergraduate fails to grasp the meaning of what the lecturer is saying that he gets bored and fails to listen. If he knew what the lecture was about, the chances of his losing interest would be much less. It has worked exceptionally well in the classes in which it has been used. Why not give it a try in more of them?

"The Varsity"

The Serious Professor

B. K. SANDWELL, B.A., F.R.S.C., editor of Saturday Night, recalling undergraduate days during the course of an address before the Oshawa branch of the University Alumni Association recently, stated he was very serious as a youth. He read serious books; he talked seriously; in fact, everything was very serious.

There was certainly no evidence of that seriousness in youth to mar his address before the local alumni. As a matter of fact the address was one of the most brilliantly humorous, if not the most humorous, to be heard in Oshawa in some time. Droll humour sparkled from his every sentence as he treated in lighter vein subjects which would ordinarily occasion serious statements.

His final conversion to the realm of humour was brought about by his association with Professor Stephen Leacock, noted humorist and late professor of McGill University, he confessed. From him he learnt "It is possible to be a really intelligent man and yet be funny; even to be a professor and yet be funny."

Mr. Sandwell was at one time himself a professor at a university. He could, therefore, now look back and realize the great capabilities of humour in driving information home to students.

If this was a conversion of Professor Stephen Leacock it was a mighty fine one. Professor Leacock was recently asked to retire from the faculty of McGill University because of age. Professor Leacock did not like this move. However, his humorous writings are so much in demand, that we hope, that he will have no spare moments despite the discontinuance of his work at McGill.

Probably Professor Leacock might establish a post-graduate college for university professors to learn about humour. In such a college he could fill a long felt want, in dragging out of many university professors their unnatural and uncalculated seriousness and instead instil into them the germ of humour and wit. Our theatres might suddenly all become empty following such a move. The crowds would be, instead, at university hearing the learned professors wise-cracking and putting across valuable information to their listeners in a most acceptable and easily digested style. You never can tell. It might be that "there'll come a day."

BOOKSHELF Correspondence

"The Genius of Huxley" — A Reply to L. MacG.

"EYELESS in Gaza" or "Aldous Agonistes" is no worse a novel—or whatever you call it—than his earlier yammerings.

Bird-song . . . quite unintelligible, but you recognize the prevailing mournful note.

Frustration, futility, ingrowing intellect: Freudian sexoblasts passionately eructing their passions over a dumb world of human beings too low-grade to realize its misery and psychological ineptitude.

Even L. MacG. has caught our Aldous at his favorite game, just like Aristophanes debunking Socrates.

Scene: The spotlight shows Socrates suspended in a wash-bucket twenty feet above the stage where the play of life is in progress.

Q. "What are you doing up there, Socrates?"

A. "Walking on air, and sun-gazing."

Scene: Eyeless in Gaza.

Q. "What are you doing there, Aldous?"

A. "Got a human tick under the microscope."

Q. "Why?"

A. "Dissecting him to prove absence of soul."

Q. "Why?"

A. "Oh, bung off!"

The serious student of Aldous Huxley will find in him a stylist, an experimenter with new methods of composition, and an artist in emphasis, and in the avoidance of conventional dead-wood in literature.

If he will then proceed to take as gospel or as articles of belief (a matter of individual bias) Lewis Gannett's introduction to "Antic Hay" in the "Modern Library," he will not be upset by Aldous Huxley's puppets, however dazzling their lack of moral fibre, spiritual values, or even decency.

The mathematician bases a most interesting world on a few axioms which he knows do not correspond with human experience.

Aldous Huxley writes about a most interesting world from which he has blanked out certain intuitions which come to most of us just as surely as the nest-building or migrating intuitions of birds.

If he cannot believe we have these intuitions, he is surely "eyeless in Gaza," where the slaves are having a better time than he ever dreamed.

Elegy Written in an Empty Classroom The Deserted Desk

Gone are those days when he was there.
Scratching his head or combing his hair,
Spitting on the floor or rubbing his eyes,
Staring at the ceiling in search of noisy flies.
Following everything that was out of the class,
For the teacher, he was a real ass.
Not a lack of intelligence, no sir!
But his brains were made of a stuff lighter;
So light that it would not keep on the ground:
Like a weathercock it kept spinning all round.
A gentle companion was he, and a great guy too,
His wisecrack production equalled that of two;
Brainwaves reached his mind in a way so easy,
That I justly could call it high-frequency.
And, boy! was the fellow good for drawing;
He could do anything, sketches or advertising.
And the only reason for the childish behaviour,
Was the short distance between him and his neighbors.

They were two, and I am one of them;
But our racket shall never be heard again.
One might have thought by all our jokes
That we had been paid to disturb our folks.
This went on for a good part of the year,
But at length, the teacher's anger was to fear.
Words were useless, acts were better:
Orders came to move, and not to loiter.
Without a word, he slowly went behind,
'Twas a sad day, I still hear it in mind.
My friend sighed with sorrow and pain,
Around his old desk, often he would stroll in vain.
But now, pain is forgotten, and my friend is happy:
His work and success were never so snappy . . .
But what became of the old desk he had?
Like an old house, it looks dirty, haunted and sad.
A few tramps have found there a good retirement
Where to park their unused classic implement.
The top is covered with papers and inkwells,
The inside loaded with books and peanut shells.
The set chair is gone and cannot be found,
Desolation has come to sadden all around.
Mirth has flown away, leaving an open space,
Sadness has come to fill the empty place.
And no more shall be heard our joyous laughs of yore,
Because R . . . does not sit there any more.

ERRATA

YOURS truly was getting in to a devil of a mess with this column. Friends were asking for a name, but I flatly refused. As a matter of fact I preferred it to be a nameless monstrosity, but one fine day she approached and, in a conversation about the business, said "What do you call them?" pronounced in venerable English "Whadiya-call-em!" After the pun had sunk deeply, and caused a very deep impression I realized the error of my ways and hence ERRATA.

Revue Advertisement

WILLIE on the subject of puns and names I might as well add my two cents to the subject. It is just about this time that everybody starts thinking what the next Red and White Revue is going to be called. Extending my memory back over a period of years, recollecting dancing co-eds and funnier comedians, I recall "Off Key 1 Sing," "13 Nightie," "From Dad to Verse," and further associations with such wise-cracks as "Bachus Inn" or "Bachus to the Land," and, if you can take this one, "The Applause that Refreshes."

Enough Is Plenty

ENOUGH ribald humour is usually too much for the average student to take in in one day so, I adopt more serious duties, and become an English Grammarian. These serious duties ought to be recognized, by every columnist and more people, I am sure, will start worrying about the English language. What strikes me is that there should be a more scientific relationship between the names given to the people of different cities or countries. Let me illustrate. If a city is called Halifax, why the devil are the people called Hallowians? After much thought I finally arrived at a classification which at any rate simplifies the etymology of the situation. Here it is in seventh year grammar form.

Words Ending in Vowels

TAKE the ending "ian" such as Caniela-Canadians. At this point something has gone wrong with the classification, eg., America-Americans. There is only one thing left to do; try another vowel such as o . . . take the ending "onian" Toronto-Torontonians again the classification seems all right. Before going any further I must instruct my dear readers what to do in the emergency when faced with a word ending in a consonant.

Montreal-Montrealer, New York-New Yorker, London-Londoner, Berlin-Nazi; so far, so good but look what happens: Halifax-Hallowians, Madrid-Madrilenos, Moscow-Muscovites, Venice-Venicians, and a youngster told me that people in an autonomous state are called Ottomans (that will slay you).

Organize Santa Claus

SHALL student labour organize? Is Santa Claus to be a Union man? Can scabs be obtained for the parade to Toyland? These are some of the questions on everybody's lips. More important, shall we join the Green or Lewis factions? Do we believe in organization along craft or industrial lines? The future shall unfold the picture for us. In the meantime let me try and give you an idea of what might happen to the parade in some future year.

Parade

THE caterpillar, which I am sure has been observed by most students, will carry a sign reading "Organized by Chemists Union, McGill University Local, Honours in Chemistry students." Along side this demonstration are Chemical Engineers bearing banners, clamouring: "Chemists Union unfair to organized labour. Observe demonstrations only of the Industrial Engineers Union." A camp divided.

What about Santa Claus? He has been commercialized so much that I fear that one of these years he will be saying "Hello children, you can get nice radios at Hartneys; Hello children, Simpsons have a special sale on Top-hat, full-dress, patent leather shoes, white gloves and scarves for only . . . The time to take action is now; students must organize. Save Santa Claus, save the parade, save your Christmas vacation jobs.

Correspondence

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir:

In the November 20th issue of the Daily a letter was presented in which the President of 4th year Commerce made the following statement:

"May I also draw the attention of first and second years of Commerce to the fact that this attaining of the objective (Amalgamated Charities) was only made possible through fourth year obtaining 150 per cent of its class objective and third year 120 per cent. May I extend . . ."

As president of second year Commerce I feel that the following figures should be of equal interest to your readers:

First. Our campaign for the Armoury-Gymnasium was successful in that we have collected to date $334 from the class (30 in all) or nearly 40 per cent of the entire total collected by the whole of Commerce.

Second. We collected 73 per cent of our objective for the Amalgamated Charities.

Third. The average donation for the two campaigns per second year student was $7.50.

I feel that the above facts should be known in justification of second year and I was sure that the feeling of non-distinctive cooperation will continue between the four years. I am,

Yours very truly,

IAN B. SHAW.

Hockeyists After Fifth Straight Victory

Redmen Weakened By Injuries, Meet Canadiens

Bell Band Plays In Second Game Tonight At Forum — Bruce Crutchfield, McConnell Not Playing—Crosby Has Bruised Shoulder — Gordie Crutchfield, Crosby Lead Red Scorers — Victorias Against Quebec Aces In First Game

BOBBY BELL'S unbeaten band of Red Raiders will have a depleted team tonight when it seeks its fifth straight group victory against the lowly Canadiens in the second feature of the twin-bill at the Forum. Bruce Crutchfield, who broke a bone in his wrist last Saturday in Quebec, will be out of action for six to eight weeks. Russ McConnell will definitely not be dressed tonight although he was skating around the rink in yesterday's practice. That knee injured during the football season is still proving bothersome. A third injured member of the outfit, Clayton "Bing" Crosby, will be used very sparingly due to a bruised shoulder suffered during practice several days ago. "Bing," who at present is leading the McGill scorers along with Captain Gordie Crutchfield with seven points and is second in the league standing, did not think that he would be able to do much in the way of shooting at the nets, but he may be able to unloose a few useful efforts tonight.

Goalie Emerson Signed
Bobby Bell announced yesterday that he had signed goalie Emerson for the Seniors. Emerson was netminder and captain of the Harvard hockey team last year, which accomplished the rare feat of beating the Redmen. He has been turning out to practices quite regularly recently and seems to have recovered from troublesome back pains. At any rate his work during practice has shown a decided improvement. Coach Bobby Bell expects to use him in some Senior Group games later in the season, as well as some Intercollegiate games.

For tonight's tilt against Canadiens no Intermediates are likely to be brought up, although Dan Doherty was practising with the Seniors yesterday. Dave Tennant will guard the nets with sturdy Melikjohn, Elie and Mackay on the defence. There will only be two forward lines with one extra man filling in on either line. The line of Duff, Dickson and Piddock remains intact and promises to be the speediest set of forwards on the ice. Captain Gordie Crutchfield will no doubt be flanked by Crosby and Rolie Lamb. Howie Walker will be the relief man. Thus Bobby Bell will confuse the opposition by reverting to his former strategy of mixing his lines.

Canadiens Possibly Dangerous
Canadiens, although they have only tied one game this season and lost the rest, have suffered some tough reverses. Over the week-end they nearly upset the apple-cart by toppling the Royals, but finally lost out, 2-1. They may cause the weakened Redmen plenty of trouble.

The first game on the bill is between the Quebec Aces and Victorias, both of whom McGill has beaten. Royals are not in action tonight, thus a win will put the Bell band four points in the lead. These points will not be too many for a tough road lies ahead of the Redmen during the course of the next few weeks. Saturday night McGill plays Ottawa in the capital, with the crucial game against Royals next Wednesday. The Red scorers have lost their for-

Ross And MacLachlan Represent Bert Light's Boys GALA CARD ARRANGED

TOMORROW night at 8.30 in the Y. M. C. A. building on Drummond street a gala boxing show will be staged. Jack Ross, Intercollegiate champion, and Eddie MacLachlan, a promising newcomer, are the two McGill "Daniels" sent to board the "Y" lions in their den. This will be the first major boxing event of the season, and it will give McGill freshmen their first opportunity of seeing the University pugilistic hopes in action. McGill supporters, eds and co-eds, lengthy and abbreviated, meagre and copious, are expected to turn out in mobs to howl the heroes to victory. Tickets are fifty cents per.

Colorful Card
Jack Ross is matched against Ross Taylor, last year's welterweight provincial champ, who is boxing at the 100 pound weight. This is the feature bout of the evening and it should prove an exciting scrap. Jack is noted for his mighty right and if he connects, well... Ed MacLachlan has drawn for his opponent a sturdy pounder who goes by the name of Clarry Harding. The schedule runs as follows: 108 lbs.—Angelo Nicholo vs. R. Daig-nault.

Coeds Practice At Arena Today

New Players Needed To Form A Fourth Team

ALL girls interested in hockey should attend the second practice of the year this afternoon at the Mount Royal Arena from two to three o'clock. From the twenty girls who turned out to the first practice, three teams were formed, so any newcomers will be used to make up a fourth team. During the practice this afternoon, two of the teams will play a regular game and the remainder of the time will be spent in general practice. The object of this will be to find the players who can best fill the various positions.

The Intercollegiate Team will be chosen shortly after Christmas by Manager Jean Buchanan and Coach Jean Paul Elie. It will continue to practice on Wednesdays from 2 to 3 o'clock at the Mount Royal Arena. When the inter-year teams are drawn up under their captains, they will have practices on Thursdays from 2 to 3 o'clock at the McTavish street rink. This will also be done after Christmas.

Each member of the winning inter-year team will receive a small "H", and all members of the intercollegiate team will get a senior "M." Every girl who likes to skate should turn out this afternoon and give hockey her whole-hearted support.

Senior Basketeers Play McGill Grads Saturday

Exhibition Game At Montreal High Gym Opens Season — Intermediates Take On Central Y.M.C.A. Seniors — Seniors Continue To Show Form — Gormley May Turn Out—Intermediate Set-up Released—Seniors Start Schedule Next Week

MCGILL'S basketball representatives went through stiff workouts yesterday, in preparation for the season-opening exhibition game against the Grads Saturday night at the Montreal High School Gym. The Intermediates took the floor at 5:15, while the Seniors came out at 8 p.m. Neither squads have been cut to date, the Intermediates carrying 15 men, and the Seniors 12. When the final cut comes the teams will be reduced to 12 and 10 men respectively.

Seniors Shaping Well
The Seniors in particular are showing great enthusiasm, and if they continue to show the form that has marked their practices, they should be better than the squads of the last two years. The squad lacks big men, but hopes to make up this deficiency with speed and superior ball-handling. The boys themselves brought forward the suggestion that they practice four times a week instead of the usual three. For the past few years, other Intercollegiate teams have practised five times a week, and Coach Van Wagner feels that in order to produce a team capable of competing, he must have an opportunity of working with them. As a result, the boys have the extra period on Tuesdays at 8 o'clock.

The line-up for the Seniors will probably find Bowes and Hunter as guards, with Shipley at center, and Rutherford, Scriver and Tashan forwards. All these boys except Shipley played on last year's team. Shipley, Keyes and Gianasio are newcomers, while Wilkes and Wigdor are up from the Intermediates. DeMartini subbed for the Seniors last year. Grey has not shown up very consistently, but there are rumors of last year's squad, will soon turn out. All of last year's boys are much improved. Captain Bowes looks as good as ever, while Shipley, not very tall for a center, is fast and aggressive.

Only 8 or 9 men can be used in the college games, but 10 are allowed in the city league. After Christmas a couple of men may be dropped to the Intermediates. By that time, Schofield and Purdie may be out. The former came up to the Seniors during last season, while Purdie turned in good work on the Intermediates.

Intermediate Division
The set-up of the Intermediate division of the Montreal Basketball League was completed yesterday. Twenty teams compose the division, with a slightly revamped grouping over last year's layout. In the Senior division, the schedule is expected to open sometime next week. As last time-up, before they shoot the works, The Seniors will meet McGill Grads next Saturday in the feature of a doubleheader at Montreal High gym. In the preliminary, the

Seconds, Juniors In Hockey Games During Week-end

Both Teams After Their First Wins Of Season

OVER the week-end the Junior and Intermediate ice squads will be busy trying to earn their first victories. They are by no means downhearted by the results of their first game, but also they are not over-confident because they know their opponents worth.

The Juniors will go on the ice in the first game of Friday night's double-bill, opposing Royals. The Redmen tied Canadiens on November 10 in a game that proved a very fast one. Royals dropped their first game to Victoria, so both teams will be seeking their first win. A win or a tie for McGill would set them on top of the league as Victorias are idle that night. In have failed, we are neurotic; if we compensate, we are normal; if we over compensate, it is a mark of genius." Another phase of Adler's work, is his concentration on organic or constitutional inferiority, in which he attributes an organic basis to all cases of feeling of inferiority. And finally, the childhood impressions, under the particular environmental upbringing, are important in the determination of the underlying causes for our feelings of inferiority.

The speaker then cited examples of interesting case studies, illustrations from actual experiences, and the press. He then showed that the feeling of inferiority was not limited to the individual, but also to different races, and nationalities.

Then followed a list of characteristics suggesting inferiority. These include snobishness, jealousy, stubbornness, attention seeking, pedantic complex, or reflection in the clothes of one's ancestors.

The illustrations were in the main an analysis of features, an ethical relation to the personality. In conclusion, the speaker explained the term "Adequacy of Valence," as an index of a person's lack of inferiority, and comparable to the Intelligence Quotient.

"We are seeking to relate Christianity to the needs of our time, convinced that in this era of disintegrating values our generation is faced with a great opportunity and a greater responsibility for the development of the Kingdom of God and the presentation of the eternal values which underlie it."

The leading article, "The Confusion in Christian Ethics," is contributed by Dr. Frank Morley, a graduate of U. B. C., the University of Edinburgh, and P. C. McGill. Wilfred Butcher, well-known as a S. C. M. executive in Canada, is another contributor, with an article on "The World Church." All the articles and book-reviews are of a high standard, the only criticism being that theologians tend at times to become unintelligible, both to others and themselves.

Two journalists with experience on newspaper and student publication staffs are included in the management of the magazine. De Courcy H. Rayner, business manager is a sports writer and a former editor-in-chief of Toronto "Varsity." Charles Cochran is also a sports writer and former assistant editor of the "Queen's Journal." In addition there are two men with considerable experience as writers, Wilfred Butcher and Cameron Allard (Short Story columnist of the McGill Daily). J. Morton Freeman of the P. C. McGill, is editor-in-chief, with the assistance of Professor Frank W. Beare.

The P. C. boys are running around these days under the direction of Allister MacQuidrum who is welcoming subscriptions at a dollar for the year or sales at twenty-five cents a copy. The first issue consists of a thousand copies, so they have to keep busy.

ant line of medical work, but the generous remuneration accompanying successful participation in the contest is ample incentive to tempt even the most affluent.

Although student response to this endeavour in the past has been satisfactory there are many more among the undergraduates in medicine who should put their abilities against those of their fellows in this year's contest. This year the sponsors of the contest ask the special cooperation of all medical students in the hope that a host of new participants will submit their ideas for judgment.

Essays must be passed in to the Medical Undergraduate Society before February 1, 1937. Complete details of the rules of the competition will be posted on the various bulletin boards of the Medical School. Now is the time to get busy and make the necessary preparations of subject matter and ideas, and all undergraduates are specially invited to make this year's contest a real credit to themselves and a tribute to the high quality of the work that is carried on by the McGill Medical Undergraduate Society.

students have been down. Not only does it put Notmans out, but it also very much delays the publication of the Annual itself. The first part of the book to be set up is invariably the graduating section, consisting of full pages of biographies and pictures. It must be evident to the graduating students, who invariably are the ones who complain about the late publication of the year book, that it is they themselves who always slow up the work. Please co-operate with both Notmans and the Annual Board.

The Annual Board also hopes that all amateur photographers have not forgotten the Campus Life Section of Old McGill '37. Contributions of all sorts will be most gratefully accepted at either the Annual office or at the Tuck Shop all pictures will be returned to the owners after publication. Either free annuals or reductions or cash prizes will be awarded depending on the quality and the quantity of snaps accepted. Until now the only snaps on hand are those of the various rugby games and the convocation and it is hoped the Santa Claus Parade. It is hoped that here again the board will get the cooperation of the student body.

They should send a letter of application to the Registrar outlining their plans for further research and giving the names of the professors under whom their post-graduate work has been mainly done.
